Recap

Cain meets Vice Captain Daim to store his monster materials, but the room Daim offers is too small. Cain shocks Daim by revealing a mountain of A-rank monster materials, including an earth dragon, a feat that would challenge an entire A-rank party. Daim wonders if Cain is a hero or a disciple of the gods, but Cain insists he is just a normal boy. While the knights appraise the materials, Daim introduces Cain to the Royal Chivalric Order and suggests a mock battle while they wait for the captain. Initially underestimated due to his appearance, Cain swiftly defeats a knight using Boost. When Daim asks Cain to face all the knights at once, the captain, Tifana von Liebert, intervenes and challenges him herself. Cain narrowly wins the duel using Clock Up, and Tifana, impressed, declares she will marry him. Cain protests, citing his age, but Tifana insists, stating her elf heritage makes the age difference irrelevant.

Tifana takes Cain to meet the king, where she announces their engagement, shocking everyone, including Cain's father, Garm. The king reveals that Tifana's lineage makes her proposal akin to one from a princess. When informed of Cain's secret engagement to Telestia and Silk, Tifana remains undeterred and declares her desire to marry Cain even stronger. The king, intrigued by Cain's abilities, questions his extraordinary strength. Cain eventually reveals he retains memories from his past life in Japan and regularly meets the seven gods, who granted him his incredible stats and the title of "God's Chosen." The king, astounded, commands everyone to keep Cain's secret, even suggesting Cain could be king, which Cain firmly declines. Tifana reappears with her father's permission for their marriage and drags Cain off for another mock duel. As the king reflects, he hopes Cain will protect the kingdom, his family, and his loved ones while maintaining his humility and compassion.
